"Surveying," noted schoolboy George Washington in 1745, "Is the Art of Measuring Land and consists of 3 Parts; 1st, The going round and Measuring of a Piece of Wood Land 2d Plotting the Same and 3d To find the Content thereof. . . ."

Both Washington and Robert E. Lee used strategic surveys in their military campaigns. Young Washington helped map the Shenandoah Valley. Lee began his career as an Army Engineer.

We have gone around 1965-66. It lasted 180 school days for 2,160 students and 172 adults. We have measured it. In this book we will attempt to plot its course.

PRINCIPALS

Assistant Principals' Ability Aids W-L Staffs

A complex institution, the school and its daily procedures depended on the ability of leadership. Mr. O. U. Johansen, responsible for the co-ordination of all programs which comprise Washington-Lee, found support in the form of the assistant principals. This staff consisted of athletics director, Mr. John Youngblood; head of the guidance department, Mr. Thomas Haynie, and director of the instructional program, Mr. Richard Blocker, whose job concerned the designation of books and teachers for specific subjects. Mrs. Doris Matthews, the only woman on the staff, carried the responsibility of discipline of the girls, organization of the school calendar, and extra-curricular activities.

The administrators welcomed a new member, former math teacher, Mr. J. Boyd Webb. His duties lay in discipline of the boys, and school maintenance, which included repairs to the building, supervision of the custodial staff, and organization of the bus schedule.

The responsibilities of each individual on the staff of principals co-ordinated to form the basic leadership which determined the reputation of Washington-Lee.

The Director of Guidance, Mr. Thomas Haynie, compiles some data for the bulletin board concerning the number of students in each class.

GUIDANCE

Baffled Students Seek Help From Counselors

Crowding into the Guidance Office, confused sophomores, career-minded juniors, and college-bound seniors congregated to iron out difficulties by talking to their counselors. The competent staff made up of eight counselors, headed by Mr. Thomas Haynie, and a secretary, busied themselves with such work as scheduling, checking seniors' requirements, and keeping files up to date.

The Vocational Guidance, a subdivision of the department under the direction of Mr. Lester Wilson, undertook interesting programs throughout the year. On "Armed Services Day" representatives from the different military branches offered first-hand information on enlisting. Through the distribution of pamphlets and books, students gathered information concerning vocations during "Career Day." Employers from the various local companies came to the school on "Placement Day" to talk to students planning to work following graduation from high school. In these capacities the Guidance Department assisted students not only during their high school years, but also prepared them for fields after graduation.

As a counselor Miss Beth Drake spends a number of her working hours listening to problems, acknowledging questions and offering advice.

As Mr. O. U. Johansen's secretary, Mrs. Geanie Riviello holds responsibility for the minute details which form the base of the principal's activities. Accepting phone calls, co-ordinating schedules, and gathering information for Mr. Johansen are included in the duties.

OFFICE STAFF

Secretarial Staff Runs Information Center

Secretarial duties now prove more strenuous than ever. This year, W-L employed fourteen secretaries, one of them part-time, to assist at the school. The three office secretaries seemed jacks-of-all-trades, fulfilling the tasks of telephone operators, mailmen and typists. These secretaries also manned an information center at the main desk, open to all who needed their assistance. Everyone with questions pertaining to school seemed to find their way to these helpful secretaries.

The secretarial force affected many aspects of student life, from getting schedules changed to finding a lost sweater. Two secretaries could be found in the library and in guidance, as well as four instructional and one attendance secretary. Two secretaries also worked as registrar and bookkeeper-treasurer. Without the assistance of these efficient secretaries, the functions of Washington-Lee could never be carried out as effectively.

W-L's instructional secretaries, Mrs. Agnes Corum and Mrs. Beverly Plant, patiently await clerical assignments from harried teachers.

Both the daytime and nighttime janitors have many duties to perform throughout the school, from cleaning classrooms to helping with many extra curricular activities. Here one of the daytime custodial staff sweeps a hall of the deserted school in preparation for another day.

SCHOOL PERSONNEL

'School Personnel' Aid Student Body, Faculty

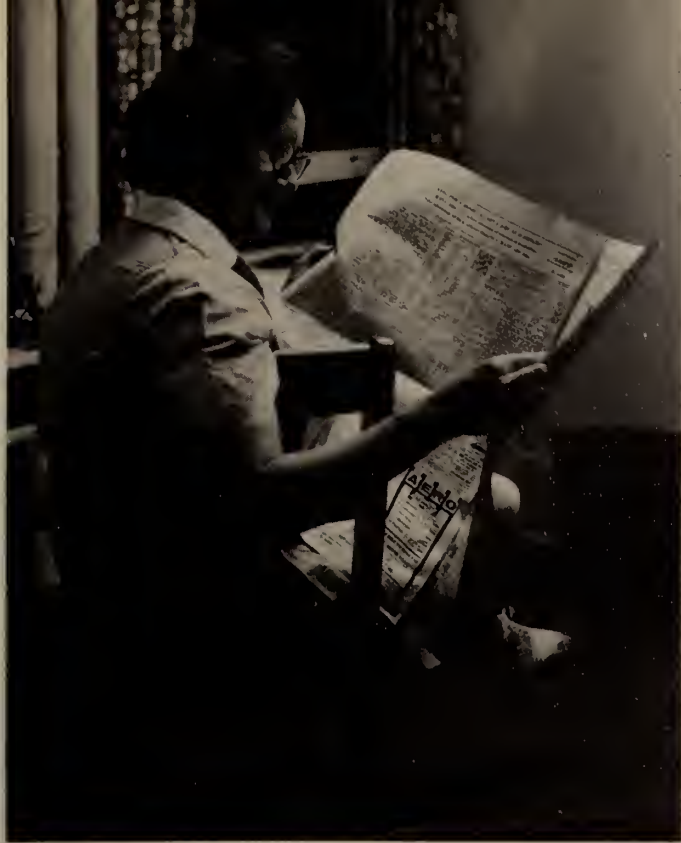

School personnel, including the nurse, custodians, and cafeteria help, made up a very important part of W-L's school functions. These people helped the students and faculty in various ways. The school nurse administered to the needs of sick students and prepared for any emergency that could arise. Besides their regular duties, the janitors assisted both students and teachers in extra curricular activities.

A new manager with extensive background in group nutrition worked in the cafeteria. Under her management, the cafeteria served the best lunches possible with its facilities. Throughout the lunch room, signs could be found with such sayings as "ever heard of a malnourished athlete?" to encourage students to eat the school-prepared food. These personnel helped the student body and faculty through a succesful year.

Keeping students health records up to date is one job performed by Mrs. Evalyn Taylor, school nurse and her assistant, Mrs. Mildred Aburn.

Custodian Mrs. Mary Dodson, friend of the Blue and Gray, relaxes after finishing the White House with "Archie" of the Sun comics.

Cafeteria ladies prepare a hearty lunch as the manager supervises to insure a well-balanced meal.

Mass production is a recurrent characteristic in the W-L kitchen where the highly skilled cafeteria help busily prepare hundreds of lunches for hungry W-Lites. Along with preparing lunches, the cafeteria staff launched a program to promote the sale of lunches.

Up-dating Emphasized In Academic Schedules

Col. Carl Brose gestures emphatically to his English class during a lecture on the contributions of John Milton to English literature.

Law teacher, Mrs. Ray Rothouse, thoughtfully retraces the day's varied activities as she carefully plans for the coming day's lecture.

Revision of curricula with emphasis on modern methods and techniques and a broader range of study seemed to be the key-word in academics this year. The continued use of science and language labs, updated textbooks and an academic program including several experimental classes, constituted the more scholarly aspects of school life. Changes made ranged from the readily obvious, such as the acquisition of much needed equipment for the science department to the more theoretical areas including new methods of interpretation and teaching for some courses.

As a service available to all students during study halls or before and after school, the library saw many changes. Under the direction of a new librarian, the library offered earphones through which students could listen to records and a new arrangement of furniture which enabled more rapid and efficient use of materials.

Several experimental courses initiated this year served as a link between departments. A two-period course for juniors, which earned those participating a credit for both English and History, was the American Civilization class. A further addition to the ever-expanding English department came in the form of the World Literature course. World history taught in French, which could serve as either a credit in history or French, created a connection between the foreign language and social studies departments and also extended to students an opportunity for more extensive use of a foreign language.

Science and mathematics found most of their revisions to be of an updating nature. The introduction of more new texts will eventually lead to an incorporation of several courses into one. Chem Study and a corresponding course for biology students focused the attention of science students away from memorization of facts to a reasoning process developing inquisitive thinking in science.

Senior girls had an opportunity to participate in a regular gym class for the first time through a course offered by the health and physical education department. An unusual feature included the use of a nearby bowling alley and other recreational facilities.

Industrial arts students turned their creative abilities once again into practical uses. Woodworkers built toys for Arlington County elementary schools, while those in the print shop printed tickets for school dances and other events.

Child care, previously a part of the regular home ec. course, was expanded to become a separate subject. Girls in the class learned how to care for children by practical experience with the help of the nursery school which they ran.

Creativity in one form or another found vent in the Art and Music Departments. Those not so talented enjoyed the benefits of these departments through concerts, assemblies, art shows and hallway displays.

Data processing, an increasingly important field, found its way to Washington-Lee through the Business Department to complete the academic revisions and improvements.

The simplicity of rectangles and spheres draws attention in the office—Kappa Service Club's idea, during Teacher Appreciation Week.

Stimulated by the challenge of a novel idea, woodshop students industriously labor over the production of coffins, to serve as props at a benefit dance. The project provided an opportune time for the employment of advanced techniques, taught in Mr. Hans Klose's class.

Helping the art department decorate various windows throughout the school in a festive mood, Marlene Witt captures the Yuletide spirit.

Senior Doris Brown tries her hand at a different watercolor technique that will portray her idea.

ART DEPARTMENT—Mr. LeRoy Anderson (Department Chairman), Miss Jeanne Gilman, Mrs. Sheila Cowan.

Deliberation marks the faces of juniors Maria Arnold and Janet Myers as they explore shades and techniques in the world of water colors.

Art student Jane Melvin works carefully to complete a class project while Suzi Gore thoughtfully studies a sketch for the Penman cover.

Ready to correct her German paper as Dr. Lenore Geweke comments on the mistakes made by students at the board, junior Francine Stoss attentively listens to the helpful suggestions. Possibly thinking of a correction to her paper, she keeps her book open for reference.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Additional Language Lab Yields New Facilities

Gesturing to his Spanish class, Mr. Norman Underwood smilingly tries to explain to students a difficult exercise in Spanish III grammar.

French I students Andrea Binkley, Tarig Izaz and Vara Coggins find that the language laboratories make pronunciation decidedly easier.

Physical Education Program Adds Senior Gym

Margie Valis attentively looks on while bowling partners Bernadette Quirk and Ann Covey total their scores. Participating in Miss Joann

Williams' senior gym class, recently added to department electives, the girls choose athletic activities in which they are interested.

"Get the second one on the right," suggests Miss Joann Williams as junior Andrea Koerner aims.

Carla Wright, joining the fine feathered friends of the sky, vaults over a high jump during gym in an effort to break the class record.

Emotions run high and sticks fly as Andi Binkley prepares to receive the ball from Carolyn Jones in a frenzied game of field hockey.

Isometric exercises can make breathing difficult, as Gary Peet, Rick Jacobson and Wayne Wright discover during Mr. Roger Cole's health class.

HEALTH AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPARTMENT—Front Row: Mr. Jack Walker, Mrs. Betty Eads, Mr. Roger Coggins, Mrs. Alma Gallego, Miss Barbara Reinwald, Mr. Jerry Power. Back Row: Mrs.

Mary Causey, Mr. John Youngblood, Mr. Glenn Causey, Mr. Newton Harris, Mr. Roger Cole, Miss Joann Williams (Department Chairman).

Girls Prepare Foreign And Gourmet Courses

Mrs. Beulah Anderson makes a quick check on home economics notebooks as her students plan menus for future use in a food planning unit.

With a perplexed look on her face, senior clothing student Gloria Ross ponders over a helpful sewing illustration in the Bishop Book.

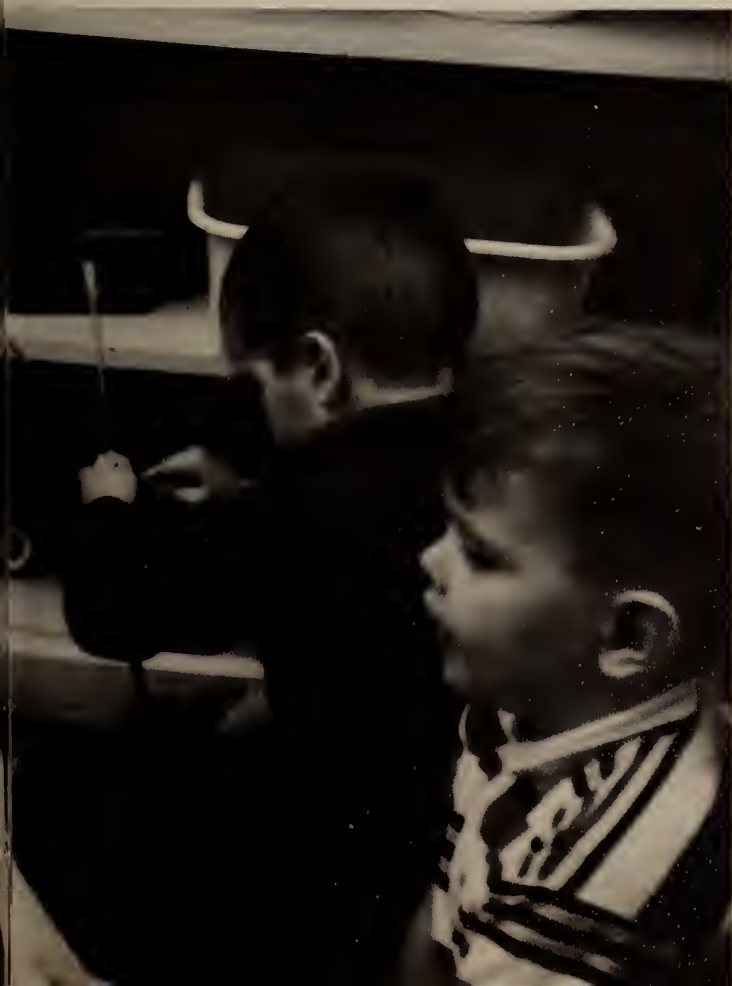

Home ec. teacher Mrs. Faye Wickersham explains the intricacies of a sewing machine as senior Gay Free carefully listens to directions.

Junior Peggy Jo Horne, practicing to be a future homemaker, tackles the job of grating cheese for an exotic dish the class is preparing.

Future "Little Generals," pupils at the W-L nursery school, are entertained by Patsy Elliot, student of the child development course.

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT—Mrs. Janet Lee, Mrs. Beulah Anderson (Department Chairman), Mrs. E. Faye Wickersham.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS DEPARTMENT—Mr. Benjamin F. French, Mr. Hans-Peter Klose, Mr. Robert Seidel, Mr. Marvin Wisdom, Mr. Paul Harding, Mr. Bruno Paras (Department Chairman).

An observant photographer catches a fellow student hunting carefully for reference materials necessary for an assigned library exercise.

Junior Chris Joyce, completely absorbed, sits in a crouched position as he thumbs through the pages of a book for possible information.

As one of a library assistant's various duties, junior Sandra Lane assists a fellow student to check out several needed books.

Senior Edith Baumann discovers term paper assignments often create competition as she scans the library shelves looking for important research material. To ease this situation, the school library holds many books on the reserve list for various teachers and departments.

After carefully working out her geometry problem on the board, soph Margie Monday explains the steps to Miss Elizabeth Dalton's class.

Pointing to a geometrical string Christmas tree design display, Mary Hicks smiles proudly to acknowledge the part she helped construct.

While her math class strains to comprehend a difficult problem, Mrs. Louise Allston explains the steps used in finding the correct answer.

BLUE AND GRAY

Fresh Ideas And Methods Improve Yearbook

Although the work demanded just as much effort, the production and the outcome of the finished Blue and Gray changed a great deal.

In the layout, changed to magazine style, pictures often covered two full pages with the addition of several color pictures.

Hoping to increase the amount and improve the quality of the work yielded, the sponsor of the Blue and Gray, Mr. Cleary, introduced a system of points. Staff members qualified for points according to the quantity of work turned in and the amount accepted for publication.

No longer did harried-looking Blue and Gray Representatives rush about, trying to keep deposits straight. This year, yearbook staff members handled the subscriptions, manning booths during the day from November 10th to the 24th. Those students who wished to save the amount gradually could deposit sums towards the total at the school bank.

News Reporters Actively Cover School Beats

This year, change swept through the White House. Crossed Sabres reporters not only assumed the duty of covering news events but also interviews in the school. This service also benefited Blue and Gray copy writers in obtaining needed information for the yearbook.

In gathering news, reporters were assigned certain beats which they covered the entire year. These areas consisted of clubs, honor societies, academic departments, sports, and dramatics. Working in pairs on two or three beats, newspaper reporters kept abreast of current school events and regularly handed in news paragraphs.

Staff members received points for articles published in the newspaper under the new point system. Reporters also earned points by working in the darkroom, having their pictures published in the newspapers, and selling ads.

Eyes sparkling with amusement, junior Fran Olsen pauses in her work as Assistant News Editor to laugh with a Crossed Sabres associate.

PENMAN

Penman Prints Annual Student Directory In Fall

Sixth period at the White House, a diligent staff of nine planned W-L's literary magazine, Penman. During the year, students and teachers submitted poetry, fiction, and non-fiction works of the students to the staff, who chose the best for the publications, issued in the fall, winter, and spring. Penman could be bought through the English Department and also 'at Brentano's. Of all the area high schools, W-L alone had the literary magazine sold there.

In the fall, the Penman staff compiled students' and faculty's names, addresses, and telephone numbers into the annual Student Directory.

To gain funds, Penman sold popcorn after school on Wednesdays and during home football games. Students also bought flowers from the staff on May Day. In addition, Penman entered various literary contests throughout the east coast and exchanged magazines with other high schools in every part of the United States.

A word of friendly advice comes from Clay Sassaman, as he aids Penman Editor, Pete Seeley, in his choice of fiction for the magazine.

ART CLUB

School Publications Utilize Art Club's Talent

The Art Club, reorganized from the former Penman Art Club, encouraged all art enthusiasts to join.

Self-assigned projects enabled enrichment of personal interests, while critical analysis rendered by others helped members to obtain practical tips for improvement. To develop an appreciation of art, the club provided field trips to art shows and galleries as well as movies on artists and art techniques.

The club benefited the student body by arranging bulletin boards around the school, painting murals, and doing illustrations for various publications. The members also demonstrated their artistic talents by participating in the Annual Art Show.

Putting the finishing touches on one of the Art Club boards, senior Kris Todd concentrates on part of her old-fashioned Christmas mural.

STUDENT COUNCIL

SCA And Wakefield Co-sponsor College Night

Everyday as sixth period came around, the Student Council met in the White House to organize the year's long list of proposed projects. The Council attempted to serve more diligently this year with the student's best interests in mind.

The year began with College Night held in October. Sponsored jointly by W-L and Wakefield, the program offered the opportunity for students to visit represented colleges. The judging of Christmas doors by Council officers, and the anticipation of getting cards through the Student Council post office added to the excitement of the holiday season. Novelty week and the Bermuda Hop highlighted the Council's activities in the spring, with every student participating in the daily antics.

As winter arrived, thirty domestic exchange students left to spend a week at Central High School in Little Rock, Arkansas. The trip proved valuable because the students received a broader understanding of different domestic, educational, and social opinions. Little Rock students returned the visit with the arrival of spring.

Student Council Treasurer Dave Gustafson takes a short pause before contemplating expenses and making the regular financial report.

Adding their own fresh ideas are Sophomore Senators Jack Fleming and Harry Leichtman who quickly learn the ways of the Student Council.

The epitome of the efficient secretary, Sally Peck, pencil in hand, drowsily takes notes at a Student Council meeting.

Before the daily council meeting, junior senators, Bill Matson and Jim Almand, confer on last minute details for the Christmas assembly.

Lee Area, second vice-president, and Bob Jack, first vice-president, both cheerfully execute their assigned duties.

Senior Senators Judy Flynn and Jeff Braswell both manage a smile as they wind up a tiring day of problem-solving in the Student Council.

The music room resounds with the blended voices of choir members as they perfect hymns to be performed at the Easter Sunrise Service.

Receiving instructions for the next pep rally band number, seniors Randolph Pitts and Paul Heiberg concentrate carefully for their cue.

Gathered around Choir Director Miss Florence Booker's piano, students hurriedly look over a new sheet of music in the hopes of singing the unfamiliar tune correctly. In the early spring, many sophomores and juniors, both girls and boys try out to become members of the Choir.

MUSICAL GROUPS

Students Display Abilities In Musical Activities

The music groups, providers of accompaniment and entertainment for assemblies and other school programs, gave talented students opportunities to display their musical abilities, whether vocal or instrumental.

The combined forces of the Mixed Chorus and Girls' Choir united for many performances to form the Festival Chorus. As such, the members sang at assemblies and nighttime concerts. In the hope of interesting future students to join the Mixed Chorus or Girls' Choir, as well as entertaining junior high students, the group travelled to Swanson, Stratford and Kenmore.

Concerts and assemblies comprised activities for the Choir, also including a special performance at the National Cathedral. The addition of cherry red robes this year made all performances more enjoyable for Choir members as well as the audience.

The Marching Band provided, as usual, music for sports events and pep rallies while the Concert Band, in a beneficent nature gave a Christmas assembly as a gift to the school. The orchestra made its contribution by accompanying the Choir on many occasions as well as presenting its own programs.

ALPHA SERVICE CLUB

Foreign Lands Gratefully Accept Alpha Gifts

After school bake sales showed that Alpha Service Club sympathized with and profited from the mass of hungry students who propelled themselves after school towards the food at the Quincy Street entrance. This provided Alpha with a good weekly fund-raising activity. Some industrious members also sold pizza at the basketball games.

Taking time out from their own activities, members visited the Tuberculosis Association, offering their service and assistance by performing various tasks such as stuffing and stamping envelopes. The girls devoted many hours to this project. Hoping to brighten the lives of others, members also visited elderly men and women in a local home for the aged. In addition, they sent a food basket to the Welfare Department during the Christmas vacation.

The club not only demonstrated an interest in local charities, but also collected contributions to send to poverty stricken countries overseas, providing them with food, clothing, and tools.

OFFICERS: Shelley Jameson-Secretary, Linda Trogdon-Vice-President, Lee Ryder-President, Lynne Jordan-Treasurer.

Senior Lee Ryder, president of Alpha Service Club, quietly sits at her podium while conducting a planning session for club members.

BETA SERVICE CLUB

Beta Brings Happiness To Forgotten Children

Service was Beta's middle name and the club lived up to it with a full schedule of events during the year. Energetic members cleaned the W-L trophy case during the autumn to show their school pride. With the help of the club's sponsor, Miss Charlotte Weeks, the girls prepared a Thanksgiving basket for a needy Arlington family. They donated their time to the Tuberculosis Association by stuffing envelopes and also collecting money to help the research fund.

A well earned 'rest' was granted the Beta girls at their traditional slumber party held at a member's house. Then the whirlwinds started again. Beta subscribed to a children's magazine for the underprivileged boys and girls at Junior Village and sponsored an Open House in April for the exchange students from Little Rock. Filled with Easter spirit, the girls gave a party for retarded children and volunteered food for a basket to be given to a needy family in the Metropolitan area.

Beta Club Vice-President Lavillon Morrison discusses with senior Mary Flynn the possibility of a club slumber party.

BIBLE CLUB

"Old Clothes And Toys" Cries The Bible Club

The motto "To know Him and make Him known" described the true purpose of the Bible Club. By providing for all interested students an opportunity to experience Christian Fellowship, the club not only lived the words of the motto, but also benefited their fellow classmates.

Mr. Thomas Christie, the club's sponsor, led discussions which revolved around topics such as dating, marriage vows, and courtships. The talks dissolved into a systematic study of the Bible, from the Old Testament to the New. Asking and answering any questions pertaining to life, helped to alleviate any doubts the members may have had about religion.

In the spring, the Bible Club collected old clothes and toys to donate to the poor in the Appalachian Mountains. This project was started by the club with hopes of acquainting the student body with the pressing problems of poverty throughout the community. These donations were greatly appreciated by the club and desolate mountaineers.

Bible Club members Bill Brackman, Ellie Matter, Barbara Bill, and Mr. John Donahue sing hymns as Mary Bunting provides accompaniment.

DEBATE TEAM

Debators' Brain Power Triumphs Over Brawn

Unlike most varsity sports, the Debate Team used brains instead of brawn. However, similarity existed between this and other J.V. and Varsity sports in that the members practiced their style and perfected their delivery for months before the season began. Many long hours of research and study were necessary and members met every week in order to obtain constructive criticism from their fellow teammates to improve their techniques.

Under the sponsorship of Mr. John Harocopos, the Debate Team entered the Northern Virginia tournament, competing with other area schools on the debate topic, "Labor-Management Relations in the U.S." At each debate, the team with the most convincing argument and the best delivery was declared the winner by a panel of three impartial judges. The debate team also participated in two university sponsored competitions for practice before the season began in February. One was held at the University of Richmond and the other at George Washington University.

DELTA SERVICE CLUB

Delta Joins With Omega For Unique Project

Mustering all the acting talent found within the club, the Delta troupe presented their version of How The Grinch Stole Christmas by Dr. Seuss to veterans' widows at the Army Distaff Hall in D.C. For a finale, all the members of the club joined the audience in singing carols in the true spirit of Christmas.

One of the many varied projects the club initiated involved collecting old hose to send to Japanese war widows who made them into flowers. The club spent several meetings diligently working on Valentine tray favors to send to National Orthopedic Hospital. In the spring, Delta joined forces with Omega for a special activity which included reading Golden Books to orphans. The combined clubs went to an orphanage and after reading to the children left the books for them to enjoy.

Presiding over Delta, Linda Jenkins receives advice in response to the club's proposed project of reading books to a local orphanage.

DISTRIBUTIVE EDUCATION CLUB

Distributive Education Attends DECA Rally

Every day at least forty students got up and walked out of school after fourth period. These students, who represented the Washington-Lee chapter of the Distributive Education Club, worked in such businesses as retail stores in stock and sales departments.

Members of the club attended a Distributive Education Clubs of America rally at Woodson designed to bring the clubs closer together and to introduce the National D.E. President. Training young people for good jobs in the retail business world comprised only one of the duties of the club. A representative went to Kenmore to speak to students about the advantages of Distributive Education. In order to improve relations between the members and employers, an employer breakfast was held in the winter.

Selling fruitcakes door to door and at nearby shopping centers helped finance trips to Richmond and New York where members visited large corporations to observe operations first hand.

FRENCH CLUB

Car Wash Provides Money For French Films

This year's French Club earned the honor of receiving the "Club of the Season" Award as the number one interest club in the school. Under the able direction of Miss Carolyn Coggin, the all-girl-but-one club enjoyed a very active year. At one of the Tuesday meetings, the members decided to take advantage of the good food of the many French restaurants in Washington, D.C., and visited several of them at various times throughout the year. The week before Christmas, patients at Arlington Hospital heard club members sing French carols outside hospital windows.

The club also co-sponsored the newly organized French Film Festival with the French Honor Society. Once a month, a French film was available for viewing after school for all interested members of the student body. To earn money to rent the various films to be shown, the group held a day-long car wash with the promise that all French cars would be washed free of charge.

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA

Future Homemakers Hear Convention Speaker

For students who would rather sleep than drag themselves out of bed for breakfast, the Future Homemakers provided instant energy by selling donuts and milk in the school cafeteria. In October, the girls served the Young-Authors of America at a tea held at Central Library. Among their many guest speakers was Mrs. Fisher, mother of eight and wife of the President of the Board of Education. Mrs. Fisher is noted for homemaking lectures, having spoken at the National Convention of

Future Homemakers of America.

The club's Christmas project consisted of purchasing a gift for an orphan girl in Virginia. They gave her a skirt, sweater, and blouse outfit. After giving a dance in March, members made Raggedy Ann dolls for the children in Arlington Hospital for Easter.

Feeling the feminine urge to spend some of their hard-earned money, the girls planned a trip to New York over the Easter holidays.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

Future Teachers Obtain Classroom Experience

Imagine spending your life in school. Sound gruesome? Not to the members of the Future Teachers of America Club. Here the two main goals were to discover if teaching was for you, and then to learn more about the field. This was accomplished through field trips to elementary schools, discussions during meetings, and speakers. Col. Carl Brose addressed the club in February, and in the beginning of the year the club sponsors, Mrs. Edna Riley and Mr. Lynn Bondurant, told how they became interested in teaching. Projects for the club included helping teachers grade papers, entertaining children at Arlington Hospital, and working in Project Headstart.

In April members attended a banquet for the area Future Teachers Clubs, sponsored by the Arlington Education Association. Here each club discussed their own projects and heard a speaker talk on the future of teaching.

Through F.T.A., members found they could enjoy a club while furthering their vocational interests as well.

G.A.A. COUNCIL

Girls Compete To Obtain Awards In G.A.A.

Boys' Intramurals wasn't the only organization where non-varsity players could play their favorite sports. The G.A.A. Council, made up of officers and representatives, also planned worthwhile programs for the year.

Intramurals were held everyday after school where girls could participate in volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, and other varieties of sports. For incentive, the girls worked for points, which could be obtained by participating in the team sports after school, officiating for games, and being a representative or officer. One hundred points earned a numeral; 300, a pin; and 1000 won a jacket. Awards and medalions for the winning teams and players were distributed at a tea held twice during the year.

In addition to school programs, the Girls' Athletic Association held seasonal Play Days with area schools. Girls also tested their ruggedness on the camping trip to Camp Letts, Maryland, held in the spring.

Helping with the G.A.A. basketball coat check, members Mary La-Plante and Barbara Neubauer find the right coats for two waiting customers.

GAMMA SERVICE CLUB

Old Folks' Home Target of Christmas Party

Gamma Service Club began its many projects of the year with a series of bake sales soon after school opened. Using the money from these sales, members bought food for a Thanksgiving dinner to go into a basket given to a needy family in the area.

Giving a party at an old folks' home became the objective of the club's Christmas project. Here the group put together a program at which various members sang Christmas carols while others accompanied them on guitars. After the singing, members served punch and other refreshments to the excited guests.

Throughout the year, the students volunteered their time to stuff envelopes at the Tuberculosis Association. Toward the end of the year, members chose new officers, and the initiation, in the form of a party for the whole group, completed the activities of the club.

GERMAN CLUB

German Embassy Lends Movies For Meetings

At the beginning of the year, old members of the German Club held a mixer at which all interested students, whether studying the language or not, viewed slides concerning Germany. Later in the fall, several members of the group went to see the Durer Exhibit at the National Gallery of Art, where they enjoyed seeing many of the German artist's drawing and sketches.

The German Embassy graciously provided interesting films on many different aspects of Germany for the members to see during various meeting. The officers also arranged to present speakers to talk about their impressions of today's Germany.

Following in the footsteps of last year's club, the members decided to again go to a German restaurant in Washington, D.C. Besides feasting on a hearty dinner, the group heard typical German folk music.

During one of the German Club discussions, sophomores Frank Flegeal and Doug Thurman eagerly await turns to demonstrate their glibness.

GIRLS' CREW

Girls Practice Regularly For Up-Coming Races

After paddling ten hard miles, splashing water all the way, members of the girls' crew professionally bring the war canoe into the dock.

Besides invading the Potomac Boathouse, the girls crew began the boys' practice of winning championships. During the summer of '65, several girls from W-L represented the Potomac Boat Club, placing second in the Nationals. The summer contained much traveling to various races, and the girls visited New York, Philadelphia, and Canada.

Much time and toil has been spent by the girls, to achieve the point of perfection they desired. In the first weeks after school began, new girls were recruited. Practice was held once a week, during the school year, increasing in number as spring approached, and reaching as many as two sessions a day, in the summer. Warm-ups included running one to three miles, in the school months, and paddling five to six miles, during the summer.

While on shore, the crew was busy raising money for a new four-man kayak, by sponsoring doughnut sales and girls' crew dances.

GO-GO BOYS

Odd-Ogg, Go-Go Boys Encourage School Spirit

The resounding, and often unique, cheers piercing the eardrums of spectators at basketball games came from a particularly enthusiastic group of students—the Go-Go Boys. The purpose of this self-styled cheering squad, to promote school spirit, was accomplished with bounding results. If you noticed a rather short, round being seated with the Go-Go Boys, your eyes weren't deceiving you. That was Odd-Ogg—half beetle, half frog—the boys' mascot, who attends every game with the team.

Whenever possible, two of the boys put on a half-time show, with one dressed in blue and gray and the other in the colors of the opponents. Naturally blue and gray always triumphed, carrying the opponent off the court.

The season reached its climax when the team went to Richmond for the state basketball tournament. Such an event was no time for a lapse in morale, so the Go-Go Boys trekked down to the state capital, cheering all the way until they returned home.

Reluctantly giving up his hard earned money, John Findley grimaces as he hands over his share of club dues to a laughing Steve George.

Happiness is having the Go-Go Boys on W-L's side to shout victory!

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

Club Acknowledges International Set At W-L

The main goal of the International Club was to acquaint the student body with the international set at W-L. One of the major plans for the introduction of the foreign students was a program for the school, consisting of talents of the individual members of the club, many of which were representatious of their countries' customs.

The club members attended bi-weekly meetings, making plans for assorted activities. A series of dinners at foreign restaurants was included in the agenda, along with a St. Patrick's Day party and a visit to the Islamic Center. During the first semester, meetings also included the exhibition of travelogue films from a variety of countries throughout the world, many of which were the home lands of a number of Washington-Lee students. Second semester meetings were enlivened with speeches by club members, describing the customs and ways of life in their native countries. Regardless of nationality, new members were always welcome.

Under the helpful guidance of Miss Joan Baker, members of the International Club consider the fine details necessary for a talent show.

KAPPA SERVICE CLUB

Kappa Projects Support Underprivileged Child

Every month Kappa Service Club relinquished ten dollars, but the members felt well rewarded, for the money went toward the support of an overseas orphan. To raise money for the child's welfare the members held bake sales at school. Such projects aided the club in receiving the Club of the Season award in the fall.

For Halloween members of Kappa distributed free candy to the student body, and they handed out candy canes at Christmas. Also during the pre-Christmas days Kappa girls donated trees to the school. The trees were placed in the senior lounge and the cafeteria and were used for the alumnae and choir receptions. They also found time to serve the community by stuffing Christmas seal envelopes for the Tuberculosis Association.

Kappa members further served the community by making certain the elderly citizens weren't forgotten on Valentine's Day, making favors for the residents of the Sleepy Hollow Manor rest home in Fairfax.

KEY CLUB

Boys Usher For Opera Company Performances

Husky voices filled the air in sponsor Col. Kenneth Thiebaud's room as boys poured in for the bi-weekly meeting of the Washington-Lee chapter of the Key Club. The boys discussed various projects for raising money as well as ways to serve the school and community. Some of their numerous projects included acting as ushers for several performances of the National Light Opera Company, selling pizza after school to hungry W-Lites and sponsoring a charity dance after the W-L-O'Connell basketball game. For excitement the members challenged Omega to an intra-club football game in the fall. The success of this football game led to an intra-club basketball game in the spring.

The Key Club also tried to promote more school spirit, by endorsing such Student Council projects as the sound of "WLNS" which broadcasted daily during lunch, and also the Christmas post office.

LAW CLUB

Future Lawyers Study Legal Case In Court

Though not quite professional lawyers, the Law Club members had a chance to give their legal views to various guest speakers appearing at their meetings. Mr. Diamond, a stock broker, spoke and answered questions regarding stock rates and practices. Although not able to give 'hot tips' on the market, the fifteen club members did obtain valuable information from him for a future career. Speaking for the legal department in Arlington, Mr. Hassan, the Commonwealth Attorney, illustrated the various legal aspects of the County Court. Many members were amazed at the different departments covered in the court system. A member of the Securities and Exchange Commission stressed the importance of his department in the United States Government.

The Law Club accomplished what it planned for the year; with the sponsor, Mrs. Jay Rothouse, the students received an inside view of the legal system of Arlington during a field trip to the County Courthouse.

KEYETTES

Inexhaustible Energy Key Word For Keyettes

The Keyette Club devoted time and energy throughout the year to serve both the school and community. During the summer, Keyette officers telephoned the incoming sophomore girls in order to extend a welcome to W-L. Then in the fall folding and stuffing envelopes, and collecting for the Cerebral Palsy and Tuberculosis associations monopolized much of the Keyettes' time. With the Student Council, they co-sponsored an assembly on posture. The speaker, aligned with a modeling school, discussed good grooming and clothes.

Helping the senior class sell stationery, and collecting old college catalogues for the library proved the club's versatility. With hopes of replenishing the treasury, the club frequently held bake sales at various shopping centers. In the spring, the Keyettes and Key club jointly sponsored a dance. The services performed by the Keyette Club earned a second place for the fall Club of the Season award.

In final preparation for the door-to-door campaign for March of Dimes, Keyettes Cathy Casey and Joan Desberg receive an area assignment.

LIBRARY CLUB

"Assistants" Ease Tasks Of School Librarians

Nearly everyone in school takes the librarians for granted, but not the members of the Library Club. After checking out books and other materials to the students, shelving returned books, and taking care of attendance before, during study halls, and after school, these assistants found out what kind of job the librarians had. Besides these tasks, members gave audio-visual aid to teachers, processed and covered new books, and helped students not familiar with the library in finding needed books. By doing this, they not only gave assistance to librarians, but also gained experience in working with various library tools.

During Book Week in November, and National Library Week in the spring, the club pooled its talent in arranging new books for public display. Later, at one of the regular Thursday meetings, members decided to take a field trip to the Library of Congress, and avail themselves of the vast amount of material to be seen there. To finish the year, they held a picnic, a regular event of the club.

Library club members aid the school librarians in various ways, including shelving books during their study halls and before school.

MATH CLUB

Math Club, Tikos Sponsor Probability Assembly

The Math Club spent the year attempting to prove that mathematics can be fun. Interested members gave informative talks, such as one on the theory of relativity, which delved into several branches of mathematics. Mathematical puzzles and difficult equations challenged the minds of members who spent many hours working to solve them.

Combining a service project with one that involved math, the club decorated a Yuletide tree with algebraic symbols to brighten up the library during the holiday season. The club sponsor, Mrs. Louise Haack, generously lent her home for the Christmas party. During the party, members enjoyed experimenting with the mathematics of cards.

Together with Tikos, the Math Club co-sponsored an assembly at which an authority spoke on the probability of winning at gambling, or why you can only lose when you gamble. Spring brought a trip to the David Taylor Model Basin for members of the club and a party, concluding an enjoyable year.

While members of the Math Club watch fascinated, Chris Reedy, president, finishes a complicated algebra problem on the circular graph.

MAJORETTES

Majorettes Triumphantly Bring Home Trophies

Who were those pretty girls performing at half-time during the football season? They were the Washington-Lee Generalettes. Although the corp itself has been a school tradition, it is only in recent years that the twirlers have come up to W-L standards, and have made several shiny additions to the school trophy case.

Football games, parades, and competitions are all a part of a majorette's world. This year they even performed at a pep rally. Parades included one at Annandale in October and Falls Church on Memorial Day. When spring came, the girls busily prepared for competitions. Their biggest one was the Winchester Apple Blossom Festival where they spent four days in parades, competitions, and fun. They also marched at the Cherry Blossom Parade.

Those interested in joining the corp had the opportunity in May when clinics and tryouts were held. To qualify, the girls had to learn a routine, as well as perform one they had composed individually.

MODERN DANCE CLUB

Club Expresses Emotions In Dance Movements

The ten members of the Modern Dance Club practiced diligently every Wednesday in preparation for performances presented for Washington-Lee and community audiences. The average afternoon practice included warm-up exercises, experimentation with new movements, and the development and perfection of routines. For the spring production, held in March, nine dances contained the theme "Around the World." Included in the program were six group dances, two solos and a finale.

Becoming a member of the club required more than applying—the physical education teachers tested and judged each applicant. Requirements consisted of the presentation of three routines, individuals being judged on grace and ability. In addition, each applicant received a word, such as "red," and she gave a spontaneous routine, based on her interpretation of the word. The girls tried out and names of the chosen contestants were disclosed in mid-October.

In preparation for their presentation of a group of dances based on the theme "Around the World", modern dance club members exercise.

NU SERVICE CLUB

Scholarship Ranks As Top Achievement For Nu

High on the list of achievements for Nu Service Club, financial support of a one hundred dollar scholarship ranked as the number one project. Granted to a deserving girl, who planned to go to business college, the traditional scholarship consisted of money raised through doughnut and bake sales.

In addition, the group rewrote the club's constitution, altering and strengthening the sections dealing with a point system and club elections. As a spring project, Nu members made Easter baskets for patients in the children's ward at Arlington Hospital. An over-night party, held during Christmas vacation, was distinguished as Nu members' celebration of the year.

Held every two weeks, meetings included the discussion and debate of future plans, including tentative projects for the school year of 1966-1967. The club saved money this year, in hopes of adopting an American orphan next fall.

MOUNTED GENERALS

Horsemen Practice For Annual Competition

Mounted General members met on a regular Friday basis at Patty's Stable near Annandale during the school year. Here they often practiced for the annual horse show held in the spring. The cold weather hindered the members from riding very often, so during the winter the club restricted activities to a movie for all horse lovers which partially financed the riding show.

The main event of the year centered around the spring show, where members showed talents in many ways. The two days, one set aside for both English and Western type saddles, offered competition and a chance to win prizes in many events. Washington-Lee horsemen won ribbons for riding abilities in various fields. Later in the spring, the club members enjoyed a country-style hayride, which officially concluded the activities of the year.

NATIONAL BETA CLUB

Talented Valentines Perform For Beta Dance

Smoke, decorative floats, and roars of joyous cheers filled the air at the traditional National Beta Bonfire preceding the G. W. game. To highlight the bonfire, a stuffed dummy representing a G. W. player was burned in effigy.

With the arrival of February, National Beta sponsored the annual Charity Ball, all proceeds of which went to charity. At the dance five girls competed for the title of "Miss W-L," being judged on the basis of talent by a panel of faculty members, students, and chaperones.

Beta representatives went to a statewide convention in Roanoke, Virginia from March 18 to 19. They held discussions on various aspects of club management and club improvement. The girls also elected state officers to serve for the upcoming year. Social life consisted of a dinner, and later a dance. The girls returned home with new ideas of value for the club next year.

While preparing table decorations for the Charity Ball, Cathy Casey and Ginger Easton glance around to view the partially completed gym.

Service clubs like to make money as well as do their part for the school. Omega does both by selling cokes during basketball games.

OMEGA SERVICE CLUB

Football Fans Follow Motorcade To GW Game

The long line of cars that trailed out of the school early Thanksgiving morning and then headed for G. W. was sponsored by the members of Omega Service Club. Dedicated to helping the school, the boys volunteered their time to lead enthusiastic students to the annual football game. During half time, they drove group floats around the cheering stadium. Besides helping at the Thanksgiving game, some of the club members sold cokes at the school basketball games while others cheered the team on to victory with the Go-Go Boys. The boys donated the money earned from these sales to the Athletic Department for future athletic programs.

The Tuberculosis Society gratefully accepted the club's help as members energetically hauled mailbags from the American Legion and stuffed numerous envelopes. Near the end of the year, Omega, with the help of Mr. Quenton Franklin, sponsored a successful school dance, earning still more money for school activities.

PEP CLUB

Rallies And Posters Stimulate Student Spirit

Under the sponsorship of Miss Jo Ann Williams and the cheerleading squads, the Pep Club promoted the traditional Washington-Lee school spirit, by means of posting banners throughout the school. Members of the club volunteered to make posters to remind students of the various up-coming events, including wrestling matches and soccer games. For the purpose of raising money, the club held bake sales after school, offering a variety of homebaked treats for ravenous students.

At monthly meetings, the members gathered to decide what posters needed to be made and discussed various plans to arouse student enthusiasm for the school. Arrangements were made for the decoration of lockers with pep slogans and reminders of future games, and a morning pep rally, which resulted in an exuberant turnout. Unknown to most of the W-L student body, the Pep Club was open to boys, too, but members of the male gender were a scarcity to be found at meetings.

PSYCHOLOGY CLUB

Supernatural Mystifies Psychology Club Students

A greater understanding of psychological problems underlined the purpose of the Psychology Club. Under the able guidance of Miss Cora May Reich, the thirty members studied and experienced new techniques in psychology.

Various guest speakers appeared at the club to explain and illustrate the special fields that psychology covers. Dr. Cole, head psychologist for Arlington County Schools, outlined the development of psychology and the advances made in it. The students also visited St. Elizabeth's Hospital to observe the accomplishments in mental health. A field trip was taken to Florence Crittenden's home for unwed mothers. Ending a successful year, the club scheduled a hypnotist for an explanation and demonstration of the powers of hypnotism. The amazed girls learned the mysticism and danger connected with the hypnotic trance.

Experiencing the effects of the new ideas to the field of psychology induced many of the members to continue their education as psychology majors in college.

RED CROSS CLUB

Girls Play St. Nick With Christmas Stockings

The annual enrollment drive, held in November, started off the Red Cross Club's list of projects for the year. During the two weeks of the drive, students contributed hard earned pennies, and each homeroom tried to achieve the one hundred per cent participation mark. To members, Halloween meant designing and making favors for children in an area hospital.

Before Christmas club members spent several afternoons filling and decorating holiday stockings with candies and various useful articles, destined for St. Elizabeth's Hospital. February and March brought several bake sales for the purpose of refilling the treasury for next year's club.

In March, hospital patients received St. Patrick's Day favors and Easter baskets, both made by club members. Later plans for the year included a trip in the spring to an orphanage and Junior Village, where members hoped to liven a day for the children there.

St. Patrick's Day favors for Arlington Hospital keep President Sandy Smith, Valerie Roy, and Susan Atkins busy for an afternoon meeting.

RESCUE SQUAD

Squad Parks Cars, Aids College Night Visitors

To the rescue! This served as the primary goal of the Rescue Squad. A team of approximately fifteen boys, dressed in uniforms and on duty at all home football and basketball games and wrestling matches, stood alert and ready to administer first aid whenever an emergency arose. This constituted, however, only one of the important services this team of boys provided for the school. They also aided the administration in all fire and air raid drills, directing students and clearing bottlenecks. In the fall of the year, the squad helped relieve traffic congestion by helping students and visitors park their cars at College Night.

Meeting each week, the squad planned the weekend activity assignments and discussed any difficulties which may have been encountered with first aid procedures. Near the end of the school year, a competitive examination was given regarding first aid techniques and skills to determine the officers for next year's squad.

Assistants during fire drills, air raid drills, and injuries during sports events, the Rescue Squad stands by on the football sidelines.

RIFLE CLUB

Practice Makes Perfect For W-L Rifle Club

Shots heard from the rear of the Industrial Arts Building indicated another meeting of the Rifle Club. The ten members practiced on the rifle range every first and third Tuesday. Although primarily a recreational organization, the club stressed the basic safety rules and the careful maintenance of rifles, including sight alignment and the four positions used in target shooting.

While experience in shooting was not necessary for membership, prospective members were required to own their rifles. Many boys joined the Rifle Club to further their hobby as the practice range at W-L is one of the few in the area.

Besides expanding their interest in rifles, the club gave the boys a chance to improve their skill in firing and prepare for future positions on the Varsity team.

SAILING AND BOATING CLUB

Sunshine Or Snow, Sailors Practice At Marina

Those rough and ready souls interested in learning and enjoying the proper use of small crafts did so by joining the Sailing and Boating Club, sponsored by Mr. Hans Klose, a boat builder himself. Members, both boys and girls, could be seen Tuesday afternoons at the Washington Sailing Marina in most any weather. With no experience at all, some members became experts in a short time; it took only an avid interest in the water.

The main aims of the club, physical fitness and appreciation of water sports, helped members to learn the true meaning of sportsmanship. Exposed to wind and rough water, with only a small crew, members had to depend on each other and soon mastered agility and quick reflexes.

Besides sailboats, the club piloted kayaks, canoes, and row boats. In the spring, they competed with other schools in boating competitions, the climax of the year's work.

With sponsor Mr. Hans-Peter Klose aboard, Sailing and Boating Club members Bob Bales, Pat Roos, and Jack Poole prepare to shove off.

SCIENCE CLUB

Club Plans Mountain 'Caving Trip' For Spring

With the help of an area service, the Science Club found many speakers to talk about various phases of science. Life on other planets, and photogrammetry, the science of obtaining surveys by means of photography, included several of the topics discussed. Another speaker gave a lecture and also a demonstration on the art of glassblowing.

Members saw several movies at various meeting, one of which helped prepare them for a weekend field trip to a non-commercial cave in the mountains of north-western Virginia. Another such field trip, in the form of a sightseeing tour of Philadelphia and in particular the Franklin Institute, was open not only to Science Club members, but also to other science oriented students who expressed wishes to visit the science museum.

The Science Club planned to take over the job of maintaining the concession stand at home football games, which the Science Honor Society manned this year.

SCUBA CLUB

Undaunted Scuba Members Brave Murky Waters

Exhibiting true James Bond style, scuba diver Ronnie Mason emerges from a successful underwater journey during an afternoon practice.

Eight courageous Scuba Club members submerged themselves throughout the year from fall to spring. While us chickens remained by a warm fire, the skin-divers, equipped with wet suits and tanks, investigated the watery underworld of rock quarries in Virginia and Maryland. Frequent trips to the Chesapeake Bay gave them an opportunity to search for wrecked ships and cars.

The members strived to promote the sport of diving, and the safe water practices involved by showing various Navy training films, and sponsoring lectures by Mr. Mark Peterson, an underwater archeologist, from the Smithsonian Institute. For beginners, lessons given by Scuba Enterprises Incorporated, helped build confidence and arouse an interest in diving. By the end of the year, members of the Scuba Club had become proficient in underwater skindiving, and had applied for membership in the Atlantic Skindiving Council, affiliated with the Atlas Sports Store located in Washington.

SERVICE CLUB COUNCIL

Council, Clubs Cater At Honor Society Banquet

The Service Club Council and members of the service clubs utilized their talents in quite an unrelated field when they agreed to wait on tables at the annual National Honor Society Banquet in April. The presidents of all the service clubs and the Council sold tickets in March to the student body for a breakfast at the International Pancake House. The money earned from this project went to the Project Hope. Each service club also donated one dollar to Washington-Lee's New Sound to help pay for the equipment needed in the cafeteria.

Once every month, two representatives chosen from each service club attended the meeting of the Service Club Council. The council considered the activities planned by the clubs and decided whether or not the project met with school standards. The representatives then returned to their clubs with a report on council decisions.

SIGMA SERVICE CLUB

Christmas Cards Assist Lepers In Bible Study

Throughout the year, bags of old hose, sacks of candy, food baskets and noise occupied Mrs. Hilda Dryer's room. On alternating Tuesdays the members of Sigma Service Club met to discuss the purpose and destination of the various paraphernalia that was collecting in Mrs. Dryer's room.

The old hose were sent to Japanese war widows; religious Christmas cards were collected and sent to lepers in Taiwan to aid in their bible study programs. At Christmas and Thanksgiving the girls filled food baskets for needy families. They also made candy favors for the children's ward at Arlington Hospital for the holidays.

The girls aided the school by endorsing the Student Council's sound system in the cafeteria with a donation of one hundred dollars. The girls also promoted other council sponsored projects, such as the Christmas post office and domestic exchange. During Christmas girls acted as postmen, and later as hostesses for the exchange.

Sigma Vice-President Bettye Stehman appoints members to bake cookies for the upcoming spring cookie sale to help raise club funds.

Vickie Smith conscientiously bakes her part for the Sigma brownie sale as her dog, Von, drools.

Sigma joins the Christmas spirit by cutting out Christmas cards to be sent to lepers in Formosa to aid them in a Bible study program.

SKI CLUB

Skillful Skiers Brave Blizzards For Winter Fun

This year the Ski Club provided both an opportunity for the skilled skier to participate, and the beginner to learn. The president, working as a ski school director, acted as instructor to the 25 club members by attempting to teach the fundamentals of skiing—techniques of turning, stopping, walking, and first aid to those in need of additional instruction. Led by the sponsor, Mr. Lynn Bondurant, the club made five trips to Braddock Heights, a nearby ski resort. During the months lacking snow, members of the club hiked throughout the Appalachian Mountains, and along the C&O canal.

Individuals participating in each separate outing financed the trip themselves, since the routine operations of the club absorbed the dues collected. As an additional objective, the club attempted to interest other schools in forming joint clubs, and holding club meets.

Keeping up with the changing weather, Ski Club members Linda Boone, Bill Fink, and Suzanne McMenamin forego skis to hike on the C & O.

SOUND SERVICE CLUB

Sound Service Installs Speakers In Auditorium

The ten members of the Sound Service didn't hold a very glamorous job, but they performed a very important service for the school. They set up the P.A. equipment at all football and basketball games, assemblies, wrestling matches, the Two-Culture Series and other school functions. During the state wrestling tournament, members stayed on hand for three days to handle equipment and take care of emergencies which arose.

To facilitate their work and aid the entire student body, the Sound Service installed eight speakers in the auditorium. The boys had their problems, however, for during the year every amplifier went on the blink; but they always met the emergency, prepared to work.

The boys, sponsored by Mr. Bruno Paras, must have had at least one year of electronics and received training before working with the amplifiers and microphones.

Sound Service men Al Hutchins and Jerry Bonn keep watch on the P.A. system during a wrestling match, biding their time playing checkers.

SPANISH CLUB

Club Members Become Scrabble Enthusiasts

Inconsistent with the usual, the Spanish Club mixer offered a challenge to Spanish students—Scrabble. Many accepted this challenge, finding Spanish scrabble a test of skill and recall, and decided to join the club. Attempting to improve their game, members became Scrabble enthusiasts and set aside meeting solely to play and munch on cookies. By the end of the year, most of the members found themselves proficient players with an increased vocabulary.

During the month of December several members gave reports concerning Christmas traditions in Spain and Mexico. Using this information, the club threw a party Spanish style and after gathering up all the candy from the customary pinata, members sang carols with guitar accompaniment.

In the spring the club took a special trip into Washington to see Jose Greco and his fabulous dancing troupe. The program presented an interesting cultural view of Spain for the Spanish Club.

Members of the Spanish Club focus their attention on making a poster to extend a welcome to the student exchangees from Little Rock.

SWIM CLUB

Swim Club Vigorously Works For Varsity Billing

Every Saturday evening the Swim Club conscientiously devoted one hour toward developing muscles and wind by practicing the important competitive strokes incorporated into the swimming meets. Inter-school competition involved matches between Yorktown, Wakefield, Fort Hunt, and T. C. Williams high schools. The team's energy proved undaunted whether they won or lost.

The Swim Club members campaigned vigorously throughout the year for more recognition and a chance of competing as a Varsity sport. With hopes of promoting swimming as both a social activity, and a competitive sport, the swim team sponsored a splash party. Although the school year ended, the team's practicing and competition did not, as the excellent record proved. Working hard each summer contributed to conditioning them for the coming season.

Swim club members energetically go through their paces during an early Saturday morning workout at the Northern Virginia Aquatic Club.

TAU SERVICE CLUB

St. Elizabeth Patients Enjoy Tau Entertainment

Armed with cookies, punch, records, books and a portable record player, the members of Tau Service Club visited the patients at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. The girls visited the ladies about once every three weekends on Sunday afternoons. Some of the highlight visits included a Thanksgiving party, gifts at Christmas and hand made corsages along with dance sessions for the enjoyment of the patients.

Other projects consisted of selling fruit cakes for the handicapped at Christmas, building a float for the Thanksgiving Day football game and filling food baskets at Christmas and Thanksgiving for needy families in the area. The club also sponsored several bake sales after school to feed hungry students as well as to raise money for the treasury. A constitutional revision served as a self-improvement project.

VARSITY LETTERMEN CLUB

Varsity Lettermen Encourage School Athletics

Birds of a feather flock together, and so do Varsity lettermen. A new club to the school this year, they served as a sort of "Sport's Service Club." During the Virginia State Wrestling Tournament, they helped out by selling programs and working on the set-up crew. Eventually, the Lettermen will assist at most other sport functions, as well as generate interest in all the sports.

Only varsity letter winners were eligible, which did include cheerleaders and majorettes, even though they were not active this year. To add to the prestige of the group, Lettermen tried to raise money in order to buy patches to wear, as the other area clubs did.

Many of the school sports, such as track, wrestling, and baseball, not crowd gatherers, were not self-supporting. They needed money. Here, the Varsity Lettermen's Club stepped in to promote school spirit, thereby raising funds and gaining some recognition for these other hard working teams.

As students begin to gather, Varsity Letterman Bob Armstead assists in keeping the annual pre-GW football game bonfire under control.

VOT CLUB

Annual VOT Banquet Highlights Business Year

Throughout the year, the business-minded members of the VOT Club worked for two of their six class periods every day. Those students engaged in the cooperative work training program represented the club, working for various agencies ranging from banks to automobile dealers. The jobs served the two-fold purpose of providing a sense of independence, as well as giving students the opportunity to gain experience needed in future careers.

Sponsored by Mr. Richard Greene, the members met at school once a month in the evening to discuss problems encountered on the job. Since the students worked in office positions, most meetings featured a guest speaker from one of the professional fields or office occupations. Members also utilized their skills with the various business machines by performing odd jobs around school.

In April members held their annual employer-employee banquet at the Marriott Hotel, where they discussed advances in the business world.

Looking disgusted with the world of business he has recently entered, senior Mike Boster ponders over a different approach to his work.

WELCOME CLUB

Befuddled Parents Seek Aid Of Welcome Club

The Welcome Club started its activities early this year when it provided tours around the school for new students the week before school opened. During the year members found out the lunch periods of new students, and in an effort to make them feel more at ease and at home in their new school, invited them to eat at their lunch tables. They also acted as guides to befuddled parents trying to figure out the W-L floor plan during Back-to-School Night.

The club welcomed wrestling coaches from all over the state when they served dinner at a coaches' orientation, held before the state wrestling tournament this year at W-L. Then they teamed up with Sigma Service Club to sell hot dogs, donuts, cokes, and candy bars during the tournament.

WLNS

"WLNS" Provides Enjoyable Lunchtime Music

Preparing for another broadcast, Bob Wright makes ready on the cafeteria's new addition this year, WLNS—Washington-Lee's New Sound.

Jazz, rock 'n roll, folk music and popular music filled the W-L cafeteria this year. During both first and second lunches students ate in a relaxed musical atmosphere, provided by "WLNS".

The purpose of Washington-Lee's New Sound consisted of quieting the noisy lunchroom atmosphere, as well as providing students with a varied selection of music. A weekly schedule acted as a guideline as to what sort of music would be played. The scheduling resulted in the top ten tunes appearing on Fridays.

Donations from clubs and classes furnished the money for "WLNS". Speakers, amplifiers and tapes were bought and installed. Several boys acted as "MC's" during the lunch periods by announcing record titles as well as making important news announcements. The success of "WLNS" stemmed from student support and co-operation.

TEENAGE REPUBLICANS

TARS Campaign Under Emblem Of The Elephant

Promotion of party affiliation and citizenship constituted the chief goals of the Teenage Republican Club. Under the leadership of Mrs. Frances Waters, sponsor, the club worked in cooperation with the Arlington Young Republican chapter. In this capacity, the club obtained many speakers throughout the year. Speakers included a nominee for the Virginia House of Delegates and a prominent Republican in the area, Bob Peck. Besides political speakers, however, the club was also informed about the role of the press in daily life by a representative writer from U. S. News and World Report.

Activities of the club included campaigning for local Republican nominees with house-to-house solicitation. Also, many busy hours were spent voluntarily by members, working at campaign headquarters, making posters and doing various odd jobs. The club held bake sales throughout the year in order to meet expenses for official recognition as a chartered Teenage Republican Club in Arlington County.

STATE BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Little Generals Run Off With State 1-A Title

Relying on the point production of John Hummer and a tenacious defense, the Little Generals outlasted the best that Virginia had to offer in the form of 1-A Basketball champions at University Hall in Charlottesville. After the Generals ousted Hampton of the Peninsula District, 47-41, the squad took on the top offensive teams in the state—Edison, Princess Anne, and finally Patrick Henry; however, none could stand up to the test of the tight man-to-man General defense. Edison lost, 47-32, and Princess Anne lost, 50-36. In these games Eagle Pat Tomay was held to 9 points, and Dan Wells, the state offensive leader, to only 12. Before hundreds of arduous General fans, Coach Levin directed his charges to the finals against top-seeded Patrick Henry. Building a half-time lead of 28-14, W-L overwhelmed the Roanoke squad, 54-39. For Washington-Lee it was the third championship in five years.

Slipping through a gapping hole in the Patriot defense, John Carroll livens the pace of the W-L offense during second quarter action.

Following the path of Russ Bolling's free throw, John Hummer and Jim Spriggs await possible rebound in order to earn possession for W-L.

Maneuvering into a position to take a pass from John Carroll, Mike Slade evades his Patriot defender to set up a possible scoring play.

Over the extended form of his opponent, John Hummer hits for 2 of his game high 28 points in finals to lead Generals to 54-39 victory.

Cager John Hummer, a consensus all-tourney selection, displays his talent for clearing the backboards while John Carroll stands by.

ELOS HONOR SOCIETY

Elos Earns Honor Society of Season Award

The Elos Honor Society of Artistic Endeavor, composed of talented students, represented the fields of art, music, drama, and creative writing. To gain membership, the nominees performed before a board of Elos officers and student representatives from each of the fields. The honor society attempted to encourage the appreciation and performance of the arts.

During the winter, Elos sponsored several "creative bake sales." The members demonstrated culinary skills by concocting unusual foreign baked goods, which they sold to help replenish the treasury. In the spring, Elos bestowed a $100 scholarship upon a deserving senior member. They based the choice on talent and past service to Elos Honor Society. As a climax to the year, Elos received an award for second place for Honor Society of the Season.

Can you imagine the surprise you would have received as you opened your door to hear Christmas carols, and they turned out to be in French? Those were some of the circumstances encountered when the French Honor Society had its annual jaunt of Christmas caroling in December. Besides singing, for entertainment the Honor Society collaborated with the French Club in bringing a series of six French films to the school for all interested students to view. Other plans for the year included a trip to a French restaurant and a picnic in the Spring.

New members were inducted and welcomed in October. The requirements of an A in French and B average in all other subjects stood for eligibility. Candidates were selected from third, fourth, and fifth year classes. Inductions were held for a second time in the Spring.

Early in November, the eight remaining members of the German Honor Society and the sponsor, Dr. Lenore Geweke, eagerly awaited the fun of the semi-annual induction ceremony. For the initiation, the eleven prospective members worked out skits or thought up other interesting stunts to perform before the group.

At a later meeting, the students voted to assist the oreign language department by providing the German room with a classroom set of hardbound dictionaries. During January the group met and went together to see the movie "The Sound of Music."

May brought the traditional banquet, held in a Ger- man restaurant in Washington, D.C. Here the inductees received society pins, and all the members found an opportunity to put to use acquired knowledge of Ger- man.

LATIN HONOR SOCIETY

Greek Muse Of Harmony Reigns Over L.H.S.

Euterpe, Greek Muse of Harmony, reigned this year as "Mythological Character of the Year" in the Latin Honor Society. She was elected over her close runner-up, Hercules and Bacchus, god of wine.

During monthly evening meetings held in homes of the members, varied programs were presented. Of special interest was a skit in English and Latin, (somewhat reminiscent of "The Man from U.N.C.L.E.") written and produced by two members of the society. Another contributing member prepared unusual songs, games, and contests. The culmination of the year took place at the meeting devoted to feasting—an outing to an Italian restaurant.

At midyear, Latin II, III, and IV students who showed excellence in Latin achievement obtained eligibility for induction which took place in March.

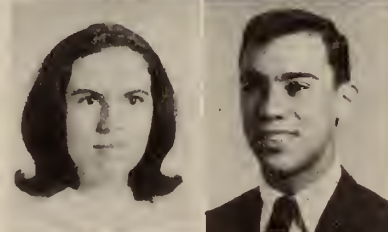

Randolph Pitts tries to convince members of the Latin Honor Society his name should be included with the ancient Greek and Roman gods.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

P.T.A. Banquet Draws N.H.S. Year To Close

The National Honor Society started an active year when members attended a concert by Van Cliburn in October. Early in the next month, the society held an induction during an assembly at which Dr. Roach, a professor of speech in New York, gave a lecture. In the latter part of November members attended a performance of Shakespeare's Richard II at Catholic University. The society maintained a bulletin board across from the administration office to relate news of cultural events and trips in the metropolitan area.

Spring brought receptions and banquets, the reception being held for new members and all parents after an evening induction. The banquet, sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association, honored members of the society with feasting and entertainment.

Speaking out on the history and the right to dissent, Mrs. Laura Crites airs her opinions in a discussion held at a N.H.S. gathering.

QUILL AND SCROLL HONOR SOCIETY

Journalistic Society Sponsors Literary Guest

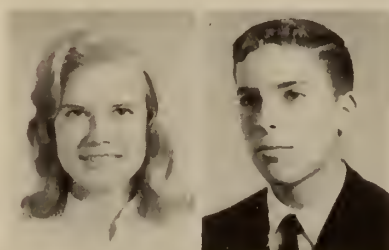

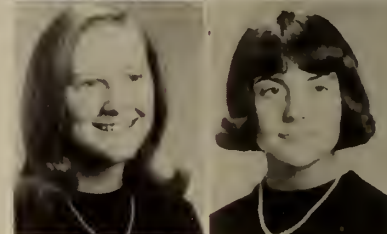

As an internationally acknowledged association, the Quill and Scroll Honor Society is known for its recognition of outstanding endeavors in the various fields of journalism.

This year the Washington-Lee chapter of the journalistic honor society maintained a glass showcase outside the auditorium displaying awards received by the Blue and Gray, the Crossed Sabres, the Penman, and the debating teams. After making arrangements for a special guest speaker, the society sponsored an assembly. In the spring, an end-of-the-year buffet took place, which included the induction of new members. A "B" average in all studies, a year of work on any of the literary staffs, and the recommendation of the staff's sponsor were mandatory for admission into the society.

SPANISH HONOR SOCIETY

W-L, Yorktown Honor Societies View Program

Experimenting with inter-school relationships, the Spanish Honor Society viewed a program with Yorktown's Spanish Honor Society in early February. The two honor societies had the opportunity to meet one another before they heard two guest speakers from Uruguay and Argentina.

An important phase of the Spanish Honor Society activities included assisting Spanish students in help sessions held after school on Monday afternoons. Students with problems or difficulties in Spanish attended these sessions and received aid from society members.

The annual induction ceremony took place in the spring. This solemn initiation which included lighted candles and an oath installed the in-coming members into the Spanish Honor Society.

At the close of the year, Spanish teachers selected from classes a student to receive the 'Best Spanish Student' award. At the final meeting the Spanish Honor Society presented the student an award.

Food Sales Reap Profits for Honor Society

Twenty-five strong, the Science Honor Society manned the two concession stands at all home football games. They sold hot dogs, cokes and coffee, which provided nourishment for the frozen fans and four hundred dollars for the society.

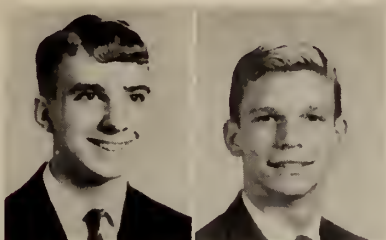

Meeting once a month on Thursdays under the leadership of sponsor, Mr. Gordon Bourne, the society carried out various routine business transactions and organized activities. Highlighting the year was a lecture from the representative of the Underwater Research Laboratory, Dr. James O'Neal, who also presented two color films for illustration. The society also aided the science teachers by conducting help sessions Mondays after school; students who needed help in the area of biology, physics or chemistry were encouraged to attend.

SPEAKER'S BUREAU

Bureau Members Announce At Ball Games

Twice a month, the eight members of the Speaker's Bureau met together to improve each person's public speaking ability. An interested student could join after giving a three minute prepared speech and a one minute impromptu speech. After this, the prospective member needed to receive a vote of acceptance from each person in the group to become a member of the organization.

Besides benefiting the individual, the Speaker's Bureau gave service to the school and community. As part of a service to W-L, the group took turns reading both morning and afternoon announcements over the public address system. Members also announced home football and basketball games.

A helpful and enthusiastic sponsor, hungry males and homemade angel food cake as bait make a successful Speaker's Bureau sale complete.

THESPIANS

Dramatists Usher For Metropolitan Theaters

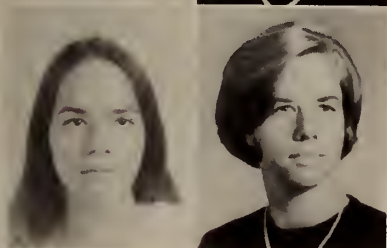

Enthusiasm and a sincere dedication to dramatics illustrated the qualities of the Thespians. By energetically staging The Glass Menagerie and Reader's Theater, they won first place as Honor Society of the Season. A student earned his membership as an apprentice for one year, which included actively participating in two plays and showing an intense interest in acting.

The twenty-three students, under the leadership of Mr. James Townsend, attended plays and theater clubs and entertained each other with dinners and buffets during the year. Working individually, one-third of the honor society members ushered at National Theater and Arena Stage.

TIKOS HONOR SOCIETY

Math Scholars Lend Aid To Fellow Students

Unlike the conventional honor society, Tikos was more than just honorary. Tikos members offered their services to the student body and faculty of Washington-Lee. Aid was given by society members to any students having difficulty in math. Members of the group were contacted by students, through math teachers, each member having been required to volunteer to tutor for at least six sessions. Another activity of the honor society was to maintain a bulletin board, an alternate responsibility for members.

Meetings, offering refreshments and entertainment, were held once a month. Acting as speakers, both students and guests covered the vast field of mathematics, such as a speech on careers in math, by a naval engineer, mathematics in music, and graphing sound waves.

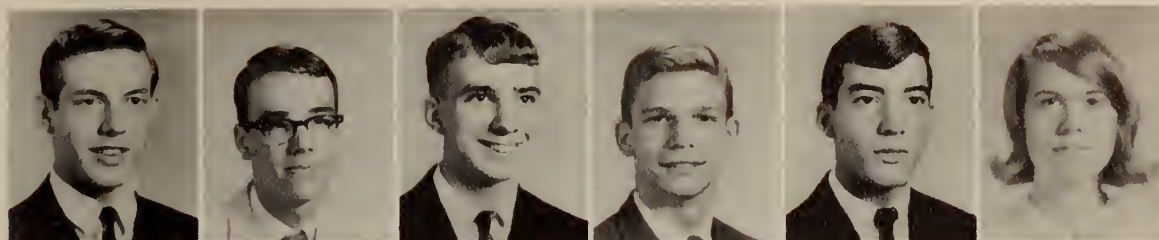

While members of the Tikos Honor Society look on, Mr. William Blake prepares to demonstrate several devices operating on the principle of probability. A W-L graduate, Mr. Blake illustrates fundamental procedures of such inventions for the benefit of would be gamblers.

VARSITY FOOTBALL

Clutch Trouble Leads Generals to 3-7 Season

The 1965 Little Generals ran into "clutch" trouble early in the season and never got out of second gear in compiling a 3-7 record. After the first three games of the season they were riding high on the crest of a winning streak, having whipped Fairfax, Marshall, and Hammond in quick succession.

Coach Cole's forces then sailed into battle with also-unbeaten Stuart. The heavier Raiders came away with the laurels in a close, 19-13 win. The loss knocked W-L from their perch as Northern Virginia offensive leaders and marked the first of a string of seven straight losses.

Though the final tally is something General fans would rather forget, the gridmen put on a couple of fine performances in a losing cause. Only some tough injuries to key men coupled with the roughest schedule in Virginia football circles (our opponents boasted a combined slate of 58 wins, 30 losses) caused W-L's

Waterloo.

Whatever else may be said of this year's football squad, they finished the season strong, playing two of their best games against Annandale and George Washington.

They held the State Champion Atoms for over two quarters before bowing to the hefty Champs, 15-0. Against G.W. the Generals knocked on touchdown's door time after time but never could push across the winning TD. Only a 58-yard fourth quarter pass saved the day for the victors, who took the bacon by a 6-0 score.

Heading up the home gridiron group were George Naughton (Most valuable), Bill Murray (Best sportsman), and Bruce Doubleday (Most improved). Copping All-District honors was guard Tyrone Epperson, one of many returning juniors.

As quarterback Mike Slade, 15, leads interference, Tyrone Epperson, 41, eludes the outstretched arm of a McLean defender on an end run.

Senior Bruce Wint snags a pass against Wakefield as a Warrior gives chase. Wakefield defeated the Generals for the second year in a row.

Sophomore Glenn DeMarr practices line skills on the blocking sled. He and John Tyler lettered as sophomores for the Generals this year.

Head coach Mr. Roger Cole and chief scout Mr. Hardy Wisdom ponder a major point in the Stuart game. Both coaches are new to W-L this year.

JUNIOR VARSITY FOOTBALL

Baby Generals Start Slow, End With Splurge

Unlike their varsity big brothers, the Baby Generals got off to a slow start and finished with a winning splurge. Led by the passing combo of quarterback Ray Jarvis to wingback Clayton Deskins, the junior varsity battled back from three straight losses to a 4-4 season's slate.

Deskins tallied five touchdowns and iced it off with four extra points for a final count of 34 points, almost half of the team total of 71. Tailback Terry Brooks was another who played a big role in the scoring columns with a final count of 19, plus hitting on 6 of 11 passes.

The big gun for the JV squad was quarterback Ray Jarvis, though. He zeroed in on 64 out of 107 passes for a pro-like 60% average. Another big plus for the golden-armed flinger was the fact that he threw only three interceptions.

In buckling down to winning their last four games out of five the gridders finished the season in a tie for second place. Coach John Crowder complimented his force for the valiant way they "bounced back, and ended the season in the true W-L spirit and tradition."

By defeating cross-county rivals O'Connell (12-0), Yorktown (14-7), and Wakefield (14-6) the junior varsity received one highly coveted honor, Arlington County Champs.

Getting "most valuable" crowns at season's end were Clayton Deskins and lineman Carl Shoff.

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross Country Team Remains State Champions

Despite a slow start this year, co-captains Steve Puryear and Charles Hargrove led the W-L cross country team to its second straight state championship. After shutting out Hammond, the harriers dropped one to McLean and eked out a one point victory over O'Connell.

The first major meet was at the Wakefield Invitational where W-L took ninth in a poor showing. Many coaches said W-L could not run well in the big meets.

By this time Yorktown was rated number one in the area and W-L was looking for a win in its last regular meet. However, Yorktown won 37-42 to give W-L a 7-2 record.

At Northern Virginia, Yorktown again took victory from eager hands as she dumped the W-L team to second place by nine points. This was good enough to send W-L to the State Meet where the Generals carried off the trophy and a victory over two undefeated teams, Great Bridge and Yorktown. Steve Puryear led the team with 16th. Other General places included Bill Mahan (24th), Brian Cloyd (25th), Dave Witkege (41st), and Charles Hargrove (42nd).

VARSITY BASKETBALL

Hoopsters Master Potomac, State Championships

Methodically and meticulously, if not unspectacularly, the Quincy Street Five swept through the regular basketball season disposing of 16 opponents, the likes of which included Wakefield, Stuart, and Woodson. But some very spectacular events crossed the Generals' crystal ball by way of the District Tournament. In the Potomac, the varsity cagers squared off once and for all with a pesky Wakefield squad, which had lost to the Generals early in the season only to return the favor later. Paced by All-Metropolitan John Hummer, the hoopsters decisively thrashed their arch-foe, 67-34, a feat which earned the team a berth in the State Tourney.

In attaining this achievement the all-around services of Co-captain John Hummer were indispensable. The 6'7" senior center consistently stuffed opposing players and controlled the backboards while taking high scorer honors regularly. Adding these features, with the sharp-shooting of Tyrone Epperson, the ball handling of John Carroll, and the rebounding of Jim Spriggs, the result was a state crown.

Shooting from the corner, guard John Carroll leaves a surprised Yorktown Patriot downright flat-footed while swishing a 15 footer.

Looking for a possible pass receiver, Russ Bolling keeps the ball an arm length away from the eager reach of a pressing Warrior.

Leaping high to avoid opposition, varsity stalwart Tyrone Epperson evokes careful aim at the Wakefield goal before releasing the ball.

No help needed here. John Hummer, the pride of the W-L Varsity, easily banks in this patented shot while John Carroll and David Logan look on in a contest against the O'Connell Knights won by the Generals, 56-54, for their second victory over the Catholic rival.

Varsity 8 oarsmen Ed Kingman, Dave Gustafson and Dave Roseman haul out their shell for an evening meet with the Cornell lightweights.

Making way for the varsity four—Ray Lecraw, Jim Dineen, John Findley, Mickey Hill and Bob Strunk—the varsity eight moves upstream.

In their Italian eight the varsity rows past Spout Run to the start of an evening exercise sprint in the drizzle against the 2nd eight.

Motorboats for coaches and judges cut wakes stirred by shell hesitating below the Three Sisters Islands while prepping for a match.

Varsity men Steve Plott, Nick Zelensky, Richard Arthurs, Randy Hall and Dave Roseman strain to pull in a start with the second eight.

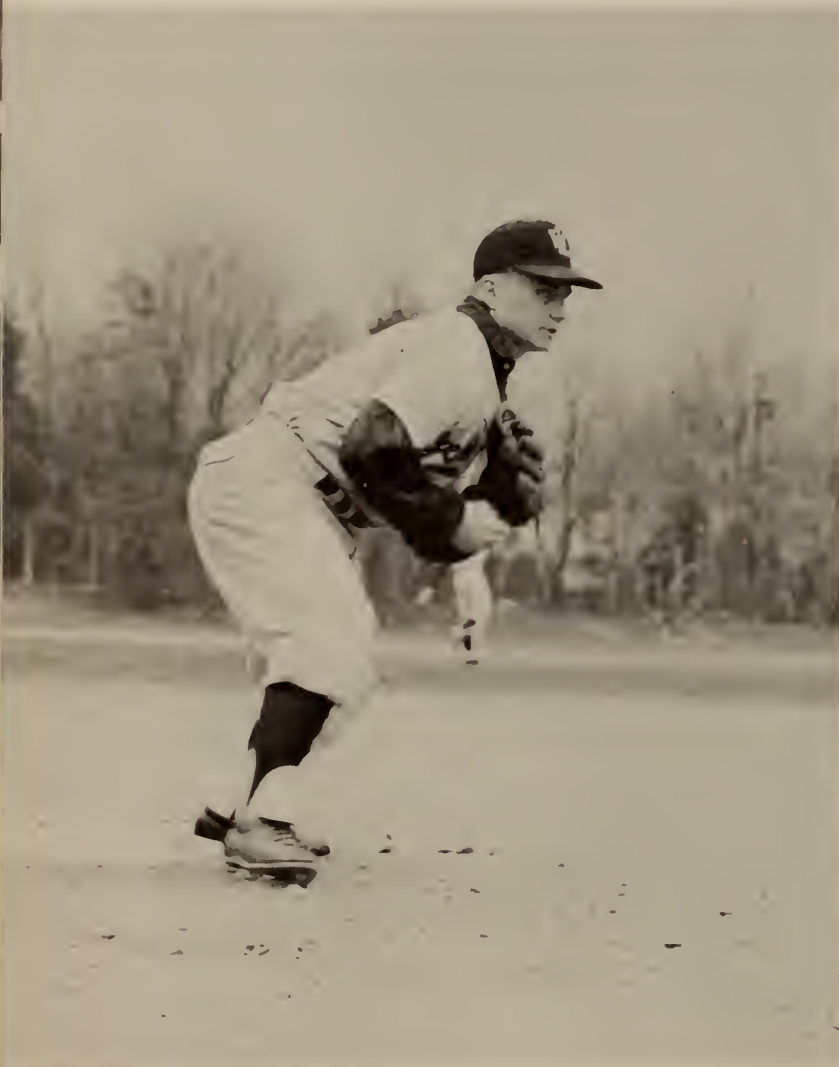

From the weight-training room in the Potomac Boat Club attic, crew members follow the slow up-river progression to the starting line.

VARSITY BASEBALL

Diamondmen Open Season With Wakefield Win

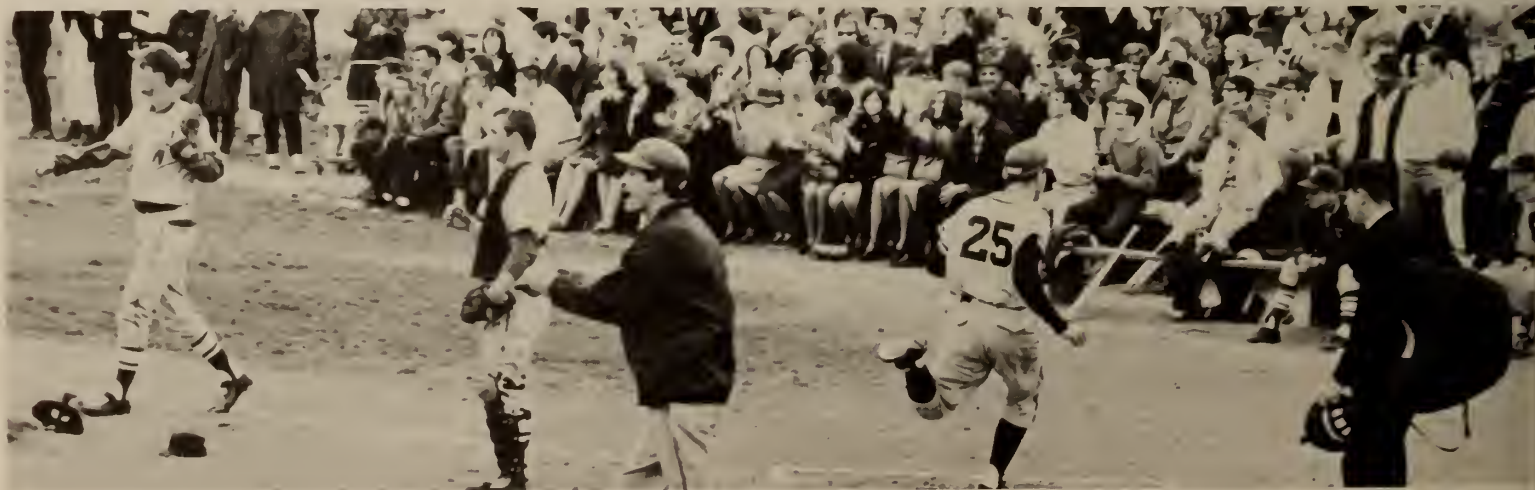

No, third baseman Steve Goldsmith's not in pain; he's anticipating a throw from the catcher during a grinding daily diamond practice.

Ken Matts, after hitting the ball to center field, sprints to first base on his way to a homerun in a 7-3 win over archrival Wakefield.

On the last leg of his homerun, junior Ken Matts leaves a confused catcher and eager W-L batter Clay Kirby behind as he hits the plate.

In preparation for another season, Mr. Del Norwood briefs the varsity diamondmen on the art of chatter during an afternoon practice.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

Sophomores Create Novel Prize Winning Float

"Big brother" appeared at Washington-Lee this year, again with the sole purpose of helping to orient the newly arrived sophomores. Each sophomore homeroom was assigned a senior homeroom president who acted as a "big brother."

Early in the fall, the annual sophomore mixer gave the members of the class of 1968 a chance to get acquainted with each other.

Shortly after their orientation, the sophomores gave consideration to the nomination and election of their class officers. This event proved all-important, for it determined the future success or failure of the class in school life.

For the sophomores, some of the year's numerous projects consisted of a uniquely constructed float for presentation at the Annual Thanksgiving Day football game with arch rival, George Washington; plans for an Easter assembly, aided by music from the Choir and Orchestra; along with several money raising projects. Some of the other minor projects ranged from the distribution of sophomore identification cards and the collection of class dues to the classic spectacle of the sophomore-faculty basketball game.

Hoping to reach the half way mark, Treasurer Andy Schwartz anxiously records and totals returning homeroom receipts for class dues.

JUNIOR CLASS

Junior Class Starts Year With Novel Idea

The Junior Class began the year with originality in the form of a dance called the Morp. The girl-ask-boy dance with the unusual feature of dancing in the halls successfully initiated the new year. Four hundred students crowded into the school, making a profit of approximately one hundred dollars, which went into a general fund used throughout the year for various projects.

On the eve of Thanksgiving, diligent Juniors completed last minute preparations on the float for the annual football game with G.W. The holiday season offered the Junior Class a chance to combine their creative and organizational talents in presenting the traditional Christmas assembly. Happy confusion began early in the new year with the ordering of class rings and ended when Seniors placed them on the fingers of proud Juniors. In May, the Seniors generously gave a money making project to the class of '67, which consisted of selling hot coffee to those who attended night school.

Finally spring arrived bringing the prom. Despite the worry and work of planning details and decorations, the prom ended the year on a festive note.

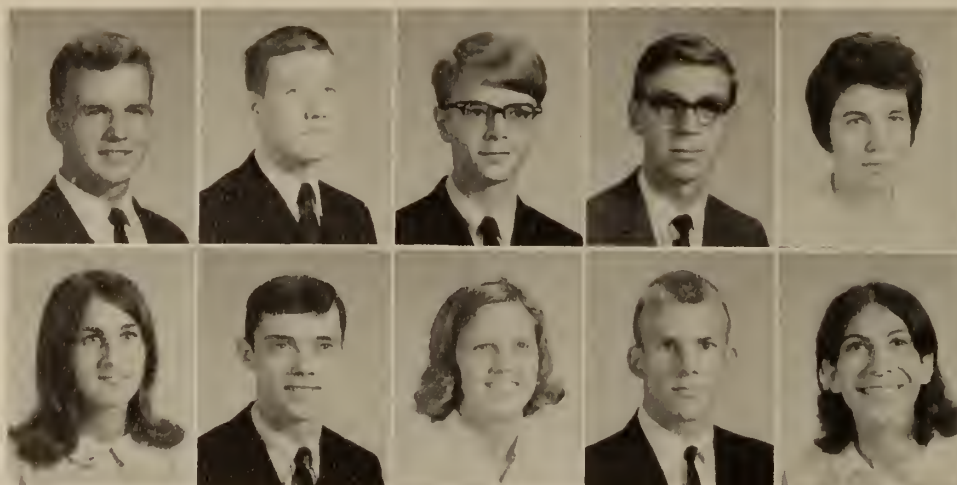

Junior Class Secretary Lavillon Morrison checks the information in her file against the opinions offered by the other class officers.

Treasurer of the junior class, Chris Midgett attends to his pleasant job of counting the receipts from one of the class sponsored dances.

SENIOR CLASS

Seniors' Enthusiasm Sparks Numerous Projects

During this past year an atmosphere of excitement, enthusiasm and determination filled the air for Seniors. Excitement arose from the mere idea of being Seniors, that long awaited status; while enthusiasm had been a characteristic trait of the class of '66 during two previous years.

The unrelenting spirit of the Seniors sparked such projects as "Big Brother," a unique way to orient bewildered sophomores; a Senior clean-up day; and night school refreshment sales.

At Thanksgiving the Seniors presented an assembly at which the Reverend Ernest Emirian spoke, along with a gala float for the annual G.W. game. The year's enthusiasm ended with the traditional Senior Prom and the long anticipated Commencement.

Determination along with prodigious class support, led to the successful and profitable completion of "Mission '66."

Gallantly, Jeff Steger opens the car door for Bettye Stehman as she tests the seat for comfort. Thrilled by the beautiful Mustangs, Falcons, and Fairlanes displayed on the showroom floor, they can't decide which one to try next. The salesmen, ready to help with these decisions, will also gladly explain the easy terms available on buying. You can select from the newest of models and colors. Looking for a Ford? Come on into Koon's, located off Route 7, near 7-Corners.

Old Dominion Bank

2926 Columbia Pike

Arlington, Virginia

JA 7-9200

Charlie Bittinger and Laurie Cocker consult a member of the staff at Old Dominion Bank about opening savings accounts. After two and a half months of hoarding dollars from a summer job, savings can easily be transferred to a handy checking account. With a deposit of ten thousand dollars or less, your assets are insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Old Dominion has eleven convenient locations; several branches stay open from 8 A.M. to 7 P.M.

LaMont Studios

5167 Lee Highway

Arlington, Virginia

KE 6-7172

While waiting to have their pictures taken, seniors Ricky Ford and Diana Boykin leisurely read one of the many back issues of the Blue and Gray, kept at La' Mont Studio.

Conveniently located on Lee Highway, La Mont's superior photography remains unsurpassed. This excellence and clarity of individual photographs has motivated many people, as well as W-L, to rely on La Mont as their individual photographer.

Whether it's a formal occasion, a private setting or class pictures, La Mont's expert photographers are always available with reliable photography service.

Troops form grimly familiar khaki patterns on a Vietnamese landing.

Stepping down from his State of the Union message, Johnson receives congressional applause for his guns and butter budget compromise.

"Take that you foul fellow!! You busy blackguard up to your vile villanies! Television tamperer! Keep away from my nice Nielsens!"

Vietnam, Protest Marches Highlight '66 News Year

Second Battalion, Fourth Marines waded into the rice paddies war at Chu Lai, South Viet Nam. Defense Dept. Photo.

Negroes march their grievances down summer-heated Constitution Ave.

Gemini VIII maneuvers toward docking with an Agena target above the Pacific soon before a thruster valve failure scare. NASA Photo.

On the steps of the Pentagon, three miles from Washington-Lee, a young father from Baltimore burned himself to death. Two hundred thousand American troops led a war in Viet Nam. A fifth of the nation lived in poverty; some of them rioted in Watts, Los Angeles. Adlai Stevenson died. America lost an H-bomb in Spanish waters.

Major Ed White walked in space. Russian rockets touched Venus and the moon. Johnson lost his gall bladder and a daughter, gained a son. Congress passed Medicare and a Voting Rights Bill, juggled tax cuts, guns, butter, and a $113 billion budget. The Pope visited New York and met with Christians from Canterbury and Constantinople. Descendants of Elvis Presley and the Beatles sang concerned "soul music."

Mrs. Wallace of Alabama and Ronald Reagan of Death Valley Days announced their candidacies. There was upheaval in Algeria, Greece, Kashmir, Santo Domingo, Indonesia, Rhodesia, Nigeria, and Ghana.

Our thoughts tackled new phrases. Peace offensive. 14(b). Green berets. Camp. The Big Blackout. A Thousand Days. Beautification. UNCLE. Dissent. Streisand.

We have completed the course of the school year, going around it. We leave you to search for the significance of the content thereof.
